

Teaching & Learning Network Luncheon

Sponsored by the MSU Teaching & Learning Committee

---

How Do You Know Your Teaching Strategies are Working?

Action Research in the Classroom

---

presented by

Anneke Metz

Assistant Professor Department of Cell Biology & Neuroscience

and

Lisa Eckert

Assistant Professor
Department of English

General assessment forms such as the Knapp are not designed to gather data on the efficacy of specific teaching interventions.

Action research allows instructors to gather meaningful data to better measure the impact of individual teaching strategies.

Action research projects can be simple or complex, but are powerful because they enable the instructor to make changes that will make a difference.

Wednesday, February 11, 2009

Room 108 Plant BioScience Building

Lunch served 11:45 a.m.

Discussion 12:00-1:00 p.m.
